The screenshot shows a Google Meet window with a presentation slide titled "Data Warehouse Architecture". The slide content is as follows:

Data Warehouse Architecture

A data warehouse is constructed by integrating data from multiple heterogeneous sources. It supports analytical reporting, structured and/or ad hoc queries and decision making. Some data warehouse may character reference finite set of source data, or as with most enterprise data warehouses, reference a variety of internal and external data. Because constructing a data warehouse is unique to the business use, we will look at the common layers found in all data warehouse architecture. All data warehouse architecture includes the following layers:

- Data Source Layer
- Data Staging Layer
- Data Storage Layer
- Data Presentation Layer

The data source layer of data warehouse architecture is where original data, collected from a variety of internal and external sources, resides in the relational database. Even though of source data, these include, but are not limited to: These above, describe

At the bottom of the screen, there is a Windows taskbar showing the time as 8:34 AM and the window title "Meet - kgi-pewi-inp". A "Stop sharing" button is visible in the bottom right corner of the presentation area. An "Activate Windows" watermark is present in the bottom right corner of the entire image.
